HONGKONG MAY 11, 1865.

THERE appears to be a sort of a murrain among the lawyers. The Chief Justice is about to leave—so is Mr. Kingsmill, and so is Mr. Owen. They are all three highly and deservedly popular men, and although lawyers are not generally a "loveable" class, we must say that these three gentlemen are a credit to their profession and that they leave with the good wishes of all who know them.

MR. LEWIS' troupe left Shanghae on the 4th inst. per Ta-pang-nyo for Hongkong via the Southern ports. We believe the object of Mr. Lewis was simply to give the ladies of his company the opportunity of taking a benefit at each of the ports on the way down. His liberality in this respect is very singular. Some managers make benefits a mere mask for filling the house, pocketing the standing part, and giving the beneficiary the bare end. With Mr. Lewis it is very different, and so entirely do the beneficiaries derive the full advantage, that they are compelled to pay for the printing &c.

THE British Consul at Yokohama has issued an injunction against Mr. Wirgman circulating the caricatures we mentioned in a late issue as having been executed by that artist in illustration of two passages from General Pruyn's anti-encyclical letter.

That epistle of the General must be republished with illustrations. It beats Mawworm, or the serious Family, or any nigger sermon we ever read.

The astute and pious author of the epistle is now here en route to Europe. We hope he will find the Missionary society of which he is a burning and a shining light, in a prosperous state.

A CONTEST is about to take place, which will test the relative speed and accommodation of British and American river steamers. The Express, a vessel built on the Clyde, is about to take the Feiseen's place on the Macao line, and the well known American boat White Cloud is put upon the line to oppose her. The public will derive all the advantage we suspect, for the line will certainly not support two boats, and as the owners of the Express have the trade in their own hands, the White Cloud must go to the wall unless reduced rates, increased communication, and greater speed should increase the traffic.

It is hardly fair in us Englishmen claiming the Express for our country. She is copied from the Americans both in model and internal arrangement. She is iron instead of wood, and she has grasshopper engines instead of a walking beam. In these two respects she is English, and it remains to be seen whether she possesses the same speed as her rival.

The White Cloud we believe to be the swiftest American boat that ever ran on the Canton river. At all events when she was new, she assuredly made better time from Canton to Hongkong than any other boat—that is, if we may be allowed the use of our own eyes and ears.

We hope there will be no accident with the boilers. We suspect both boats will be pretty hard pressed.

THE Acting Attorney Generalship has been offered to Mr. Kingsmill, and was refused by that gentleman in consequence of his having already concluded arrangements to go home. The acting appointment was than offered to Mr. Pauncefote and was accepted. It may have been made to Mr. Pollard Q. C. in the meantime—we cannot say, but certainly the numerous claims of the public on that gentleman, would have rendered his occupation of the post a very great inconvenience.

We more than ever regret the loss of the Chief Justice. There is a great want of public confidence in Mr. Ball. He is a special pleader and his judgment is consequently unsteady. Moreover he is such an intense devotee at the shrine of Popery, that being a convert to that persuasion, his mind is so decidedly impaired, that he carries his religious prejudices into the performance of his public functions. Then again he so obsequious to the powers that be, as to be adapted to be made a mere tool in their hands. We have had enough of this in times gone by, and trust a recurrence of the calamity will be by some means averted. It is not alone the local government which will be thus armed with a weapon of offence to the detriment of the mercantile community. The evil will spread to the Consular Courts, to the China Custom House system, and to the general relations of the British merchants with China. We would raise a strong warning voice to the Chamber of Commerce on the point. The British law is being shamefully strained in China to effect political purposes, and the difficulty of obtaining redress seems so great, that British merchants appear to prefer to submit to oppression, rather than evoke the upper law Courts. Mr. Ball well knows that he has nothing to expect from the mercantile community; and we believe he looks on them as heretics whom the faggot should put to rights. But the worst is that he is a time server, and will always back the government, and being a clever lawyer and a special pleader to boot, he will prove a very hard nut to crack, or we are vastly mistaken.

NOTICE OF REDUCTION OF PASSAGE MONEY.

IN the year 1857 the Directors made a considerable reduction in the Company's rates of Passage Money, which continued in force till 1861.
In that year, owing to the extraordinary rise in the Cost and Freight of Coals, and the enhanced price of all descriptions of Naval Stores, the Directors were reluctantly compelled to return to the rates of Passage Money previously in force. They are now happy to state that a decrease in the price of Coal and other expenses of Steam Navigation enables them to reduce the Company's Passage rates to the undernoted scale, which will take effect from and after the 1st June next, viz:—

Suez,	$460
Malta,	510
Marseilles,	530

Review of Politics.

"From The London Review."

We noticed last week the remarkable speech of M. Rouland in the French Senate. The subsequent debates in that assembly have tended to strengthen the impression that the relations between his Holiness the Pope and the Imperial Government are of a very unfriendly character, and that the Emperor has made up his mind that it is not worth while to conciliate the Church or the rulers thereof. Under any other circumstances, M. Chaix d'Est-Ange, speaking as a Government commissary, would scarcely have reminded the Senate in very blunt terms that France had never been able to obtain from Rome any reforms or genuine liberal institutions; and that, in protecting the Holy Father, her flag had had the misfortune to shelter also all the abuses of the Papal Government. M. Rouher professed to believe that the Pope would and could defend himself against an insurrection on the part of his subjects; but, as a minister of the Sovereign who concluded with Italy the Convention of September last, he could hardly do less. It is more important to remark his emphatic assertion that the French troops will not remain eternally at Rome, and his significant allusions to the late Encyclical. He would scarcely have been instructed to express regret that religion and civilization should clash with each other, to entreat the French clergy to intercede with the Pope, and to proclaim that the French Government would preserve its liberty of action, unless his master had determined that what he calls civilization should override what his Holiness calls religion. It would be affectation on our part if we were to pretend any regret at the differences which have arisen between Powers which we hold to be equally, though in a different way, opposed to progress, liberty, and enlightenment. There can be nothing but gain to mankind from any falling out between religious despotism at Rome and military despotism at Paris.

The Position of the Belligerents in the United States.

(From the Army and Navy Gazette 25th March, 1865.)

Surely faith is severely tested by such hard matter-of-fact statements as reach us from the other side of the Atlantic. There are some people—a great many—who mistake the expression of their sympathy with a gallant minority for actual material help. They accept their hopes as accomplished events. With all history to refute them, they exclaim that so many millions of free men can never be conquered. The fierce energy which the Southerners displayed in several of the early battles, and the masterly manner in which Lee has handled the feeble and inferior generals opposed to him, has fossilized their minds so that no argument can enter, and the hollow interior of the brain is filled with the fumes of prophetic frenzy. If Lee moved towards the Potomac, they shouted out, "Let Philadelphia beware!" When he crossed it, they screamed, "Woe to you, New York; and to you, Boston, woe unutterable!" When he retreated from Antietam, it was merely to carry off his plunder. And now that his army is threatened with starvation, will they feed themselves on the manna of empty condolence? That such a catastrophe is not unlikely as long as the present condition of affairs exists, may be easily proved by a glance at the map. At present, Lee has only one line of rail open to him, and the extensions of it are in the hands of the Federals. He asks for supplies in the most urgent terms, and Governor Vance, of North Carolina, has addressed a touching appeal to the people of his state, to forward meat and corn to the Confederate Army. But even if the people are able to respond to that appeal, it may be quite out of the power of Governor Vance or his agents to forward help to Lee. It must be known that in the greater part of the Southern States—in Alabama, Florida Georgia, and Carolina—the five-feet gauge is adopted on the railway; whilst, in the North, what is called the American gauge prevails. As Sherman advanced, all the engines and carriages were despatched out of is way till they reached the point at which the Southern gauge breaks—Charlotte—and there, by the latest accounts, 35 miles of them, consisting of nearly 3000 engines and carriages, loaded with stores, had accumulated, and were unable to get on. The diversion of Sherman towards the east may save them from destruction; but such an occurrence proves, what a tremendous blow has been inflicted on the transport and communication of the Southern armies. Governor Vance's supplies for an entire year's consumption of his family only equalled two rations per head, as he gives up half a year's supply, and only keeps a soldier's limited ration for his own use. General Lee's appeal shows some little bitterness. "I am aware," he says, "that a general obligation to support an army that has done so much, and to prevent your stores maintaining the army engaged in your subjugation, rests lightly on most men." But he hopes for the best; and if desolated Virginia and barren North Carolina are, as Governor Vance states that on "which our all depends," he may well consider the subsistence of his army greatly jeopardized. And yet the rumours concerning the evacuation of Richmond are not to be treated as true. There is no place to which the Confederates can remove which offers more advantages than Richmond, so far as we know; and any abandonment of the city would be a deathstroke to the last home of the South. On the contrary, it is more likely Lee will seek to manœuvre Grant out of his lines, to try the fortune of a general action ere he submits to be shut up by the operations of Sheridan and Sherman in his lines far away. Where Sherman is, we know no more than the people of the North; but as the Richmond papers had not ventured to announce the annihilation of his army, it is likely he was advancing towards Raleigh, with the prospect of an action ere he arrived there. If Schofield made good his road from Wilmington, and effected a junction with Sherman they would probably be able to sweep Johnston aside; but the country in front of the former was exceedingly difficult, and his 15,000 men, stiffly opposed by Hokes' 6,000 North Carolinas, might be unable to force their way through the enemy. Gillmore, who was left with 10,000 men at Charleston when Sherman advanced, has been moving for some time in the same darkness as his chief, but neither has made much, if any, way northward. These delays do not look well for Sherman; and it would be no small disappointment to the North, if he were to turn up at the seacoast near Georgetown or Wilmington, without reaching Raleigh. Waiting a little for a ray of light to rest on his course and fortunes, we turn to the better defined and ascertained progress of Sheridan, who has again dealt a rude coup at his old antagonist, Early, in that cockpit of American the Shenandoah Valley. That gallant officer left Winchester on February 27, marched thirty miles before dusk to Woodstock, twenty-seven miles next day, including the passage of the Shenandoah, to Harrisonburg; twenty-six miles next day to Staunton, where he heard Early had taken up a position at Waynesborough, thirteen miles further. Sheridan at once resolved to attack him, and sent Custer's cavalry in all haste after the Confederates, who made such a feeble resistence as makes us suspect they were merely a rearguard covering the retreat of Early's main body; though the loss of nearly 1,600 officers and men seven guns, 100 waggons, and all Early's staff, must be regarded as very serious. As the prisoners were on their way to Winchester the escort was charged by a small party of Rosser's horse, which was repulsed. Sheridan arrived next day within four miles of Charlottesville, but as he did not at once occupy that very important place he most probably found he had not captured all Early's force, and that it would not be as easy as he supposed to get to Lynchburg. His position was however, of the most damaging character to the Confederates, as he was threatening Lee's sole lines of transport and communication, and could do as much damage to them almost as if he were actually in Lynchburg itself. The country around him seemed to be filled by patriotic Virginian guerillas, but as Sheridan, had according to Northern accounts, fully 20,000 horse and foot under his command, he had little to fear from the enemy. "All is quiet" in the lines outside Petersburg. Thomas and Canby are "operating" against Mobile, which shows the story of the evacuation of this city to be untrue; but as fate of the Confederacy will be decided in Virginia and North Carolina, we attach little importance to these expeditions at present though they may ultimately harmonize with the plan of the grander campaigns.

Mr. Lincoln.

We all remember the animated elogium on General Washington which Lord Macaulay passed parenthetically in his essay on Hampden. "It was when to the sullen tyranny of Laud and Charles had succeeded the fierce conflict of sects and factions ambitious of ascendency or burning for revenge, it was when the vices and ignorance which the old tyranny had engendered threatened, the new freedom with destruction, that England missed the sobriety, the self command, the perfect soundness of judgment the perfect rectitude of intention to which the history of revolutions furnishes no parallel, or furnishes a parallel in Washington alone." If that high eulogium was fully earned, as it was, by the first great President of the United States, we doubt if it has not been as well earned by the Illinois peasant-proprietor and "village lawyer" whom, by some divine inspiration or providence, the Republican Caucus of 1860 substituted for Mr. Seward as their nominee for the President's chair. No doubt he has in many ways had a lighter task than Washington, for he had not at least to produce a Government out of chaos, but only to express and execute the purposes of a people far more highly organised for political life than that with which Washington had to deal. But without the advantages of Washington's education or training, Mr. Lincoln was called from a humble station at the opening of a mighty civil war to form a Government out of a party in which the habits and traditions of official life did not exist. Finding himself the object of Southern abuse so fierce and so foul that in any man less passionless it would long ago have stirred up an implacable animosity, mocked at for his official awkwardness and denounced for his steadfast policy by all the Democratic section of the loyal States, tried by years of failure before that policy achieved a single great success, further tried by a series of successes so rapid and brilliant that they would have puffed up a smaller mind and overset its balance, embarrassed by the boastfulness of his people and of his subordinates no less than by his own inexperience in his relations with foreign States, beset by fanatics of principle on one side who would pay no attention to his obligations as a constitutional ruler, and by fanatics of caste on the other who were not only deaf to the claims of justice, but would hear of no policy large enough for a revolutionary emergency, Mr. Lincoln has persevered through all without ever giving way to anger, or despondency, or exultation, or popular arrogance, or sectarian fanaticism, or caste prejudice, visibly growing in force of character, in self-possession, and in magnanimity, till in his last short Message to Congress on the 4th of March we can detect no longer the rude and illiterate mould of a village lawyer's thought, but find it replaced by a grasp of principle, a dignity of manner, and a solemnity of purpose which would have been unworthy neither of Hampden nor of Cromwell, while his gentleness and generosity of feeling towards his foes are almost greater than we should expect from either of them. It seems to us, we confess, a discreditable and hardly intelligible thing that the pro-Southern English journals which are exulting with such vehement delight over the squalid vulgarity of the new Vice-President's drunken inaugural—forgetting that both the squalor and the vulgarity of thought are the legacy left by the Southern slaveholders to the "mean whites" of the border States of whom Mr. Johnson, journeyman tailor of Tennessee, is the representative—should not recognise the calm and grand impartiality displayed, even though it be by a foe, in the President's recent weighty address—by far the noblest which any American President has yet uttered to an American Congress. Yet the fact is that its finest sentences have been deliberately distorted from their true and obvious meaning into the expression of a bloodthirsty spirit, the farthest possible from their real tenor. After confessing candidly the complicity of the North in the guilt of slavery, and the righteousness of the judgment by which North and South alike suffer its retribution, Mr. Lincoln went on to say, "Fondly do we hope, fervently do we pray, that this mighty scourge of war may speedily pass away. Yet, if God wills that it continue till all the wealth piled by the bondsman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword, as was said three thousand years ago so still it must be said, that the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether." Will it be believed that English journals have garbled this sentence by citing out of it the hypothetical clause, 'Yet if it (the war) continues until the wealth piled by bondmen by 250 years unrequited toil be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn by the lash shall be paid with another drawn by the sword' without either the introductory or the final words—decapitated and mutilated of its conclusions—simply in order to prove Mr. Lincoln's blood-thirstiness? They might almost as fairly cite from the psalm the words, 'If I forget thee, oh, Jerusalem!' minus the clause, 'let my right hand forget her cunning,' to prove that the Psalmist was deliberately contemplating the renunciation of his patriotic duties and ties. But these are the critics who do not wish to understand Mr. Lincoln, who wish indeed to misunderstand him.—Spectator.
